Up by Many Objections. An estate of $100,000, which has 368 claimants, with more being heard from all the time, came to light in the Supreme Court yesterday when William D. claimants to the property, which had been acquired by Julla U. Van Hise in a mortgage foreclosure proceeding.

Before the court could pass on the case an elderly woman stepped forward and said that for some reason her name didn't appear among the list of heirs whose claims to a share of the property were found to be genuine. She said her mame was Catherine Barry Buckley and she objected to a confirmation of the referee's report until her claim was passed on.

Lawyer Bosler insisted that the new claimant had no standing in court. Justice Donnolly asked Mrs. Barry why her attorney wasn't there and she replied that he was too busy, but would be on hand to-day. The hearing was then adjourned.

Commenting on the case Mr. Bosler said that originally there were 124 objections to a clear title to the property and although 100 of them have been eliminated Mr. Bosler said he is informed by the title company that the other twenty-four objections will probably delay the sale of the property until after all the present heirs are dead. He said that the only person who has benefited from the estate up to the present time is the referee, who got $1,000 for listening to testimony for 100 hours at $10 an hour.
